CONGRESS TO END SATURDAY

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

As this was written, 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, there were by actual count nine watermelon trucks and wagons parked on Third street in the single block between Main and Walnut—the route of transcontinental highway No. 67. This is no criticism of the melon traders, without whom we wouldn't have a city; but it is a criticism of a town which fails to provide a proper trading place for farm produce.

Petition Council to Buy Uniforms for Hope's Band

Bandboys' Mothers Compile Petition With Over 400 Signatures

COST PUT AT $850

Petition to Be Presented to Aldermen at Meeting Tuesday Night

A petition asking purchase of new uniforms for the 33 members of the Hope Boys Band is to be presented to the Hope city council at its session Tuesday night.

Sponsored by the mothers of the band boys, the petition contains approximately 400 names of Hope citizens.

Estimated cost of complete new uniforms for the 33 members was given at $825, the petition said.

In part the petition said: "The Hope Boys Band is composed of 33 members, and is a valuable asset to the city of Hope and Hempstead county."

"We believe that it is the duty of the city and its citizens to encourage these boys in their work and to commend them in their efforts in studying music and utilizing their time for a worthwhile purpose."

The petition also pointed out that the city had made donations to other worthwhile organizations and enterprises.

The petition was being circulated in the downtown section Tuesday morning by Mrs. E. P. Young and Mrs. Leon Bundy.

Fugitive Taken on Return to County

Bill Almond Arrested—Bill Cooper Detained on Another Warrant

Arrest of Bill Almond, Hempstead county fugitive wanted on a charge of wife and child abandonment, was announced Tuesday by Sheriff Jim Beaman.

Almond, indicted by the April grand jury, had been at large several months living in parts of Louisiana. He was arrested Tuesday morning by Deputies R. O. Robins and Reginald Bearden at Bearden's Chapel, where Almond was visiting relatives.

He is held in the county jail. Detention of Bill Cooper, taken in custody on the Stroud farm five miles east of Washington, was also announced by the sheriff.

Cooper was arrested on a warrant charging assault and battery, alleged to have been committed on his wife. Cooper is a former convict and brother-in-law of Lawson Smith, police character, the sheriff said.

Cooper is held in the county jail.

Only one person has been arrested for violation of the ordinance forbidding persons to hitch-hike in Athens, Ga., since it was passed in 1933. The case was dismissed.

First Photo of Will Rogers' Crash

Will Put Humor Into Politics and He Kept It Clean

"U. S. Never Lost a War—and Never Won a Peace Conference," Best Crack

HE HAD NO MALICE

Rogers Had Secret Hold on Millions of Plain American Citizens

By NEA, Seattle Bureau.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sunday, Aug. 18.—The first pictures of the airplane wreck in which Will Rogers, famous humorist, and Wiley Post, equally famous pilot, met their deaths fifteen miles south of Point Barrow, Alaska, were flown to Seattle today. This photo (top) shows the wrecked plane, upside down, in the shallow water, not far from its take off point. The smashed pontoons are especially clear. Only one wing, the left can be seen, the right wing having been torn off in the impact of the fatal landing against the icy hummocks of the frozen tundra.

By NEA, Seattle Bureau.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sunday, Aug. 18.—Caught just as he was stepping aboard aboard the airplane in Fairbanks, Alaska, for the ride which ended in his death when the plane crashed near Point Barrow, Alaska, this (bottom picture) is the last photograph ever taken of Will Rogers, world-famous humorist, whose tragic fate and that of Wiley Post, famed flyer, shocked the world.

This is the second of four stories revealing the homely sides of Will Rogers which gave him his unique position as First Jester to the American people.

BY WILLIS THORNTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Will Rogers was much more than a cheap joksmith. There was a quality about his humor that had nothing whatever to do with the kind of story that starts out "It seems there were two Irishmen..." In fact Rogers personally disliked that sort of joke, and was seldom caught punning.

To say that Rogers took his humor seriously is more than to repeat the old truism that most humorous are really lugubrious fellows at heart. They are serious because they are thinking of what hard work it is to be funny. Will Rogers never bothered about that. He was serious because he was thinking of what might be the effect of his joking.

To Will Rogers a simple joke for the joke's sake was like corn-flakes without milk—pretty dry going. "A joke has got to have its foundation in truth if it's going to enjoy the process of getting over to the audience."

Philosophy with a Grin

Typical of what he must have meant was this one pulled during the Democratic convention of 1920: "Bryan was cheered 15 minutes, then voted against 6 to 1." There is a lot of pretty profound political philosophy in that one. Huey Long, take notice.

Rogers himself, always thoughtful one of the best of his cracks was, "America never lost a war—and she never won a conference." But he admitted he got a leader laugh with such rambling stuff as "Yes, I admit that I'm one of them movie actors from Hollywood. But I'm an exceptional movie actor. I been married 20 years and I still got the same wife I started out with."

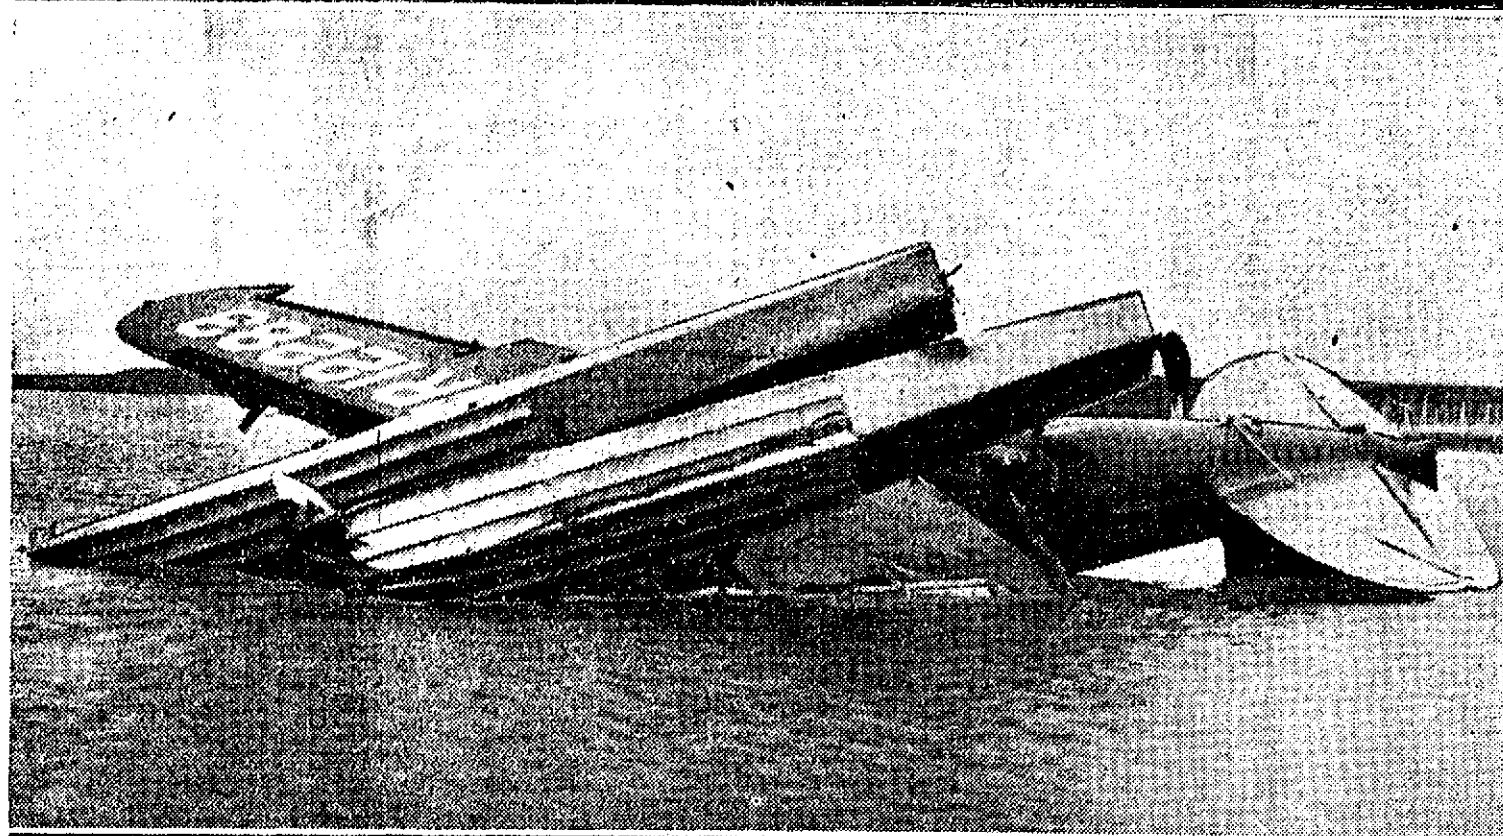

Perhaps the secret of Will Rogers' hold on millions of plain Americans lies in the story of a smart New Yorker who took a country relative to see Rogers in the Follies. The cityman laughed gaily throughout the performance, but the countryman was only quietly chuckling.

After the show the host asked "What's the matter, didn't you like Rogers?" "Sure did," replied the man from the "provinces." "But we hear that sort of thing all the time out here."

Kept His Humor Clean

It was that kinship between Rogers and the millions of other plain folks along every Main Street in the country that gave him his hold. They felt that they understood Will. His prejudices were their prejudices, his weaknesses their weaknesses, his very homely strengths the ones they had learned with him in McGuffey's Readers.

Another thing that drew many people was the fact that Rogers, operating in the theater that grew dirtier daily, remained clean. There was no stooping to profanity for effect, no double meanings. If it wasn't a joke "that betty would like," one that he felt

Karpis Threatens Death to G Men

J. Edgar Hoover Gets Message From No. 1 Enemy, Written in Ohio

WASHINGTON —(AP)—Alvin Karpis, ranked Public Enemy No. 1, has threatened the life of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-men, who has long been hunting him.

The threat was contained in a letter to Hoover from Ohio a month ago, it was revealed Tuesday.

Hoover declined to comment. Sought by federal agents since the kidnapping of Edward Bremer, St. Paul, in January, last year, Karpis was last seen when escaping from a trap in an Atlantic City hotel last winter.

Unemployable Aid Faces New Delay

Auditor Parker to Ask Ruling on County Disbursing Agents' Bonds

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)—State Auditor Parker said Tuesday he would ask a ruling from the attorney general whether bond would be required of County Welfare Board disbursing agents before he approved State Welfare Department vouchers for unemployable aid.

Parker said he believed the vouchers issued by the welfare department Monday were improperly drawn. He said they were made payable to the various county welfare boards, and he contended that they should be made out to some specific agent of the boards.

Should the attorney general hold that bond must be furnished by the disbursing agent of each county the distribution of state unemployable relief funds, originally scheduled to start this week, would be delayed further.

CCC Boys Would Hire Truck for Roundtrip

A group of boys at the Alton CCC camp, south of Hope, expect to make a visit to their home folks in St. Louis during the Labor day season and would like to arrange with some Hope truck-owner for transportation on the roundtrip. Community council could be made with Joe Graceffa of the camp. Mr. Graceffa's letter to The Star reads as follows:

"I am a member of the CCC camp a few miles from your town. As you know, most of us are from St. Louis, we would like to go there for a visit Labor day. I would like to know of some person in Hope who has a large truck and is willing to take us to and from St. Louis at a reasonable price. Thanking you kindly, I am, JOE GRACEFFA, Alton CCC Camp."

Hope Golfers to Pay for Melons

Losing Pair in Sunday Foursomes Will Pay for Feast on Links

A watermelon feast will be at stake when local golfers tee off Sunday at the Hope Country Club course.

The tournament will determine who will play for the feast to be given by local players. Players will be divided into foursomes. The two losing players of each foursome will pay for the melons.

The tournament starts at 1 p.m. and is open to all local golfers. The feast will be given at 6 p.m. at the course.

Kentucky Guard Is Cited by Courts

Adjutant General Denhardt Named in Warrant on Contempt Charge

HARLAN, Ky. —(AP)—Bench warrants for the arrest of Adjutant General Henry H. Denhardt, head of the Kentucky National Guard, were issued by Circuit Judge Gilbert Tuesday immediately after an indictment charging criminal contempt had been returned by the Harlan county grand jury.

The indictment grew out of the movement of approximately 700 national guardsmen into Harlan county August 3 to supervise the Kentucky primary election in the county.

Rogers Funeral to Be Held Thursday

Bodies of Post and Himself Arrive by Plane in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Calif. —(AP)—In the darkened cabin of a transport plane the body of Wiley Post began its final aerial voyage Tuesday, while thousands here paid homage to Will Rogers, who met death with the aviator in the tragic Alaskan air crash.

The body of the famous humorist lay in a Glendale mortuary awaiting public and private funeral services here Thursday, while the huge transport plane sped toward Oklahoma City where services for Post will be held.

Reach Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Calif. —(AP)—Will Rogers and Wiley Post came back to Los Angeles Monday night at the end of the tragic air journey Rogers had said in his "last will and testament" would probably be "to just somewhere."

The big transport plane which returned the bodies of the humorist and his aviator companion from Seattle landed at the Burbank airport at 6:26 p.m. Pacific standard time, as the dusk was fading into night.

Into the waiting hangar the funeral plane was guided. Clotted in little groups by the runway fence were several hundreds of onlookers. They lined a cordon of uniformed police. Motors roared. The ship moved forward into the hangar. The door clamped shut.

The stillness was suddenly broken by the discovery of a photograph concealed in the rafters above the plane. Several moments of confusion followed until police caught him and

ROME, Italy. —(AP)—Authoritative sources disclosed Tuesday that a large portion of Premier Mussolini's governmental chiefs will be transferred to East Africa.

Indications are that the transfer will be made following the war maneuvers next Saturday in north Italy.

Crisis for Britain

LONDON, Eng. —(AP)—The British cabinet, faced with the necessity of deciding quickly half a dozen momentous problems arising from failure of the tri-partite conference in Paris on the Italo-Ethiopian crisis, was summoned to meet in extraordinary session Thursday as ministers Monday night converged on London from widely scattered vacation points.

Diplomatic circles interpreted the Italo-Ethiopian situation as an Italian challenge to Great Britain's prestige in the Mediterranean and in Africa.

King Takes Charge

Confronted with a situation considered by many as the most serious threat to world peace since 1914, King George took up the matter, summoning Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary to Sandringham, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin hurriedly prepared to leave Aix-les-Bains, where he arrived only yesterday to begin his vacation.

Acting Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, ending a busy day at conferences at his native Llanelli, attempted to obtain a plane for a flight to London, but was forced to take train reservations. He was rushing to

Assurance Given Roosevelt as Tax Bill Is Shaped Up

Chairman Harrison Announces Agreement on Final Draft of Bill

265 MILLION, YEAR

TVA Amendments to Go Through—Utility Bill Action Uncertain

KASHINGTON. —(P)—Speaker Byrns assured President Roosevelt Tuesday of congressional adjournment by Saturday, in reviewing progress made Monday by the house.

Speaker Byrns said it is certain that final agreement will be reached on amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), but he described the utilities holding companies regulation bill as uncertain. He was hopeful a compromise would be worked out.

Senate and house conference committee members reached a final agreement Tuesday on the 250-million-dollar tax bill, leaving out new inheritance taxes.

The bill agreed upon would increase the existing estate tax and gift tax rates.

Chairman Harrison of the conference committee estimated the taxes would bring in an additional 265 million dollars annually.

New Farm Bill

WASHINGTON —(P)—Republicans joined Democrats Monday in the senate to pass the Frazier-Lemke farm credit bill after brief debate and without a roll call.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, expressed the view that the measure is constitutional. It is designed to replace the five-year farm moratorium law held invalid by the supreme court last spring.

Fate of the bill in the house was questionable. Representative Lemke, Republican, North Dakota, said he would press for action before adjournment and forecast only a "handful" of votes in opposition. But the bill was not on the list of 11 approved at Sunday night's White House conference.

Provides Moratorium

The measure would permit farmers threatened with foreclosure and unable to obtain relief through conciliation methods to go through bankruptcy.

Courts then would permit the farmer to retain possession of his property for three years by paying a "reasonable" rental. The rental would defray taxes and insurance, and any surplus would go to creditors.

At any time up to three years the farmer could regain his property completely by the payment of its value as fixed by the court appraiser.

A creditor, dissatisfied with the appraisal, could demand an auction sale at which creditors could bid up to the appraisal value or the mortgage value, whichever were higher.

New Rail Pension Bill

WASHINGTON —(P)—A new railroad pension bill was rushed through Congress Monday within two hours, and sent to the White House for the president's signature.

The measure moved through the senate so quickly leaders had to hold up the vote until the house bill was messengered over, so it could be passed instead of a similar senate measure.

On the final vote only three "noes" against 76 "yeas." They came from Senators Hale, Republican, Maine; Hastings, Republican, Delaware, and Metcalf, Republican, Rhode Island. When an objection was voiced in the house.

Introduced by Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, and Representative Cressner, Democrat, Ohio, the bill is designed to replace the law enacted last session and declared unconstitutional by the supreme court. Pensions under the new bill would be about the same as the old, but the Wagner-Cressner measure does not attempt to

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Rheumatic Infection Tops Heart Ailments.

The heart has come to be the most significant of all organs of the human body in relationship to death. Today, heart disease leads all other death causes, by far.

When you go to your doctor, therefore, he is likely to turn most of his attention upon studies of the capacity and condition of your heart. It is interesting to consider some of the ways by which the heart may be attacked and by which diseases may overwhelm it.

Recently, some leading physicians analyzed a thousand consecutive cases of heart diseases in a large clinic in Chicago. They found that more than one factor was concerned in development of heart disease in 316 out of 1000 cases.

Rheumatic infection leads all other causes as the important factor. Thus rheumatic heart disease was present in 292 cases, complicated, however, in a considerable number of instances by other conditions.

Overactivity of the thyroid gland was the chief complicating factor. When the thyroid gland overacts, the heart is put under a far greater strain than it is when the gland is acting normally.

Rheumatic infection is, of course, a fairly common type in children. Figures for rheumatic infection vary with different parts of the country. The 1000 cases here considered included 29.2 per cent of rheumatic heart disease.

Figures from another Chicago hospital showed only 16.7 per cent; in New England an investigator found 29.5 per cent, whereas in the Pacific Northwest only 0.1 per cent was found. The Rocky Mountain and New York areas showed around 40 per cent. Evidence indicates that rheumatic heart disease is rare in the south and southwest and in tropical areas.

Two hundred sixty-two, or 26.2 per cent, of the 1000 patients with heart disease were found to have damaged hearts because of high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries. In these cases also overactivity of the thyroid was a complicating factor.

Another interesting observation was the fact that infections of kidneys, prostate, and bladder are not infrequently associated with heart disease in older people. There are, of course, a considerable number of cases in which the thyroid gland alone is primarily responsible for the damage to the heart.

In such cases it has become customary to perform surgical operations which inhibit actions of the thyroid gland or diminish it and thereby benefit certain types of heart disease. A rather small percentage of heart disease is due to venereal infection. Some hearts are abnormal in structure at the time the patient is born.

Results of such study as the one made in Chicago indicate especially the importance of studying each case of heart disease with a view to determining the special factors involved and with a view to treating the case according to these factors.

Crippling and Tragical Is This Strike Tale

If the ordinary "proletarian novel" were anywhere near as good a book as "Pier 17," by Walter Houghurst, it would be easy to agree with the left-wing critics who declare that this kind of novel is the only significant kind being produced today.

"Pier 17" tells about a seaman's strike in Seattle, and from every angle it is one of the best books of the summer. It shows us a freighter coming in from the Orient. The ship docks, and her crew learns that the seaman's union has called a strike because of a 20 per cent wage cut ordered by the vessel owners' association. They go out on the picket line, and the tugmen and longshoremen walk out in sympathy.

Then, in a series of swiftly moving scenes, Mr. Houghurst shows us the strike from all possible angles. We

SUN-TAN

BY NARD JONES © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JO DARIEN breaks her engagement to RIBBY PAUL, college girl, because he objects to her taking a job as hostess at Crest Lake Inn, fashionable summer resort owned by wealthy DOUGLAS MARSH. Jo goes to Crest Lake and later Bret arrives as a life guard.

Dr. Silas Drann's eccentric mother dislikes Jo. PETER FRAGONET, film actor, pays Jo much attention and asks her to marry him as soon as he can get a divorce. Jo becomes friendly with LOLA MONTEZ, film actress.

Prompted by his mother, Marsh asks Jo to leave Crest Lake. She goes to the city and looks for a job and Fragonet persuades her to go with him by saying that he will get a divorce.

Now go on with the story CHAPTER XXXVIII

LEANING back against the luxurious cushions of Lolita Montez's town car, Jo had plenty to think about. Lolita's revelation that she had been Fragonet's first wife, that her child was his had affected Jo with all the force of a nervous shock. Even now, after an hour with Lolita, walking in her garden and talking of pleasant things, Jo was weak and bewildered.

She had admired the little actress at Crest Lake, but that admiration was as nothing compared with Jo's feelings for her now. At Crest Lake she had believed Lolita Montez was merely bitter about Fragonet, had half-concluded that this dislike grew from professional jealousy. But now she knew that Lolita was not half so bitter as she might have been.

Jo had left Lolita with the actress's promise that she would find something for Jo to do in Hollywood. "You might as well have something at the studio," Lolita had said. "I've more influence there than anywhere, and it would probably pay more than you'd get elsewhere."

BUT Lolita had been emphatic in her advice that Jo should forget Fragonet and avoid him utterly. Now, after this latest glimpse into his stormy story, Jo could well agree. Looking back on the whole thing, Jo realized how reckless and foolish she had been. She could only hope that she hadn't already gone too far—or that Fragonet hadn't—for she still feared the threat of trouble from Edna Fragonet. As Peter had hinted, Edna might lose her temper, once his picture was released and she stood a better chance of payments from him.

Lost in her troubled thoughts, Jo did not notice the sleek blue roadster which drew alongside the car as Lolita's driver waited for one of the boulevard lights to change from red to green. Then through the open window she heard a familiar voice from the roadster. She leaned forward and saw Silas Drann at the wheel of the other car. At sight of Jo his round eyes grew rounder still.

"Miss Darien! I thought this was Lolita's car and—" "It is," Jo smiled. "Well," laughed Drann, "you never can tell in Hollywood. What are you doing?"

The traffic bell sounded, and hurriedly Drann formed a new question. "Where can I get in touch with you?" without thinking, Jo repeated her address. "Fine," said the director, shoving his car into gear. "You'll hear from me soon."

As Lolita's car moved on with traffic Jo leaned back against the cushions and smiled at Drann's apparent friendliness. She hadn't the slightest notion that he'd get in touch with her at all.

THE next day she stayed close to her room, following the advice of Lolita who had said she'd telephone. But as the hours wore on and she did not hear from the actress, Jo decided that something must have happened to delay Lolita's plans. She had just decided to get a breath of outside air when her landlady called up the stairway.

"I'm sending up a Mr. Drann," she shouted, as though Jo Darien were somewhat deaf.

Jo hurried to the door, wishing that the bungalow owner wouldn't be quite so liberal-minded in her handling of male callers. But it was too late—the bulky form of Silas Drann was already on the stairs.

"Good evening, Miss Darien," he puffed. "I was afraid I might not find you in—but I took a chance and stopped by on the way to the studio."

Embarrassed, Jo invited him to sit down. "I—I suppose Miss Montez sent you?" She was puzzled, for Lolita hadn't mentioned what work she had in mind for Jo at the studio, and Jo hadn't for the moment imagined it would be anything in Drann's department.

At the question, Drann raised his eyebrows. "Montez? Oh—yes, she did." He dropped into a chair, relaxed. "She's wonderful, I think."

"Yes, we all think so." The director cleared his throat. "Now—Miss Darien, had you ever thought of going into pictures at all?"

"You mean—you can't mean acting in them," laughed Jo.

"That's just what I do mean," snapped Drann. "Miss Darien, I want you to take a screen test."

Jo could hardly find her voice. "But I—I'm so absurd, Mr. Drann"

Not even in amateur theatricals, and—

"So much the better! If you get through a good screen test—if your beauty registers at all and your voice is passable—I will make an actress of you. I have done that before, many times. I did it with Montez."

"But, I—" Jo broke off, laughing. "I'm sure it would be all for nothing, and even if I could no actress I'm . . . not sure I'd want to be."

"Nonsense!" Drann almost yelled inside the little room. "I watched you at Crest Lake. You are beautiful. You are natural. You are young. I want you to be at the studio tomorrow at 10. Ask for me." He got up abruptly, but in hand. "You'll promise to be there?"

"Why . . . if Miss Montez wants it, yes. But I thought she had something in mind for me in the office somewhere."

"In the office," Drann repeated in disgust. "You can get nowhere in the office. I'll see you tomorrow at 10!"

Then, without the formality of a goodbye, the director was gone. Jo stood watching him from the window, saw him push his heavy frame behind the wheel of his roadster. Somehow she wished Lolita Montez hadn't drawn Silas Drann into her affairs. Instinctively Jo mistrusted him. He seemed more like a heartless machine than a man.

At 10 tomorrow, Drann had said, at the Atlas lot . . .

THE man at the big wide gate which guarded Atlas from the rest of Hollywood was instantly suspicious. But when Jo gave him the name of Silas Drann a little of his suspicion melted—but not sufficiently to allow him to let Drann's office and verified her appointment. Once he had determined this, he was courteous itself.

"Just go right on in, Miss Darien," he said. "It's that big white building to the left there. They'll tell you where Drann's office is."

As Jo made her way to the administration building of the Atlas organization she saw none of the ceaseless activity she had expected. All about her were high enclosing walls and behind them, she supposed, the real picture-making went on. Some of them were dotted with signs warning, "SILENCE," or "NO ADMITTANCE," or "DO NOT ENTER WHILE RED LIGHT IS ON."

Even the grass in front of the administration building was not to be disturbed, although the sign was a gentle one, pleading simply, "PLEASE!" Jo obeyed, directing her steps to the narrow concrete walk.

She did not have to inquire for Drann. She encountered him almost in the entrance way. "Ah!" he burst out, smiling. "Right on time! And punctuality is a first requisite in this business. Come on. I want to rehearse you a little."

Taking her by the arm he led the bewildered Jo across the pavement and into a small building which was empty save for a canvas chair, a table, and a maze of lights and wires overhead. Drann plopped immediately into the chair.

"We won't do much," he said. "Let's see you walk."

Jo looked at him, startled. "Walk, walk! You know how to walk, don't you? . . . That's good. Can you smile on order?"

Jo found that she could, but her smile was really genuine for she was amused at Drann's pompous absurdity. Now he handed her a sheet of paper from his pocket. "Read that. Read it just as if it were a letter you were reading to someone—but make it clear and understandable."

Her voice trembling a little, Jo read the typewritten paper. Her hands were shaking so that she found it difficult to make out the words.

"I'll never do at all," she told him, returning the sheet of paper. "I'm so scared."

"Don't be such a child!" Drann barked. "There'll be only myself, the cameraman and a sound man there. We've all seen and heard much worse than you. You want to keep remembering that you might turn out wonderfully well on the screen."

It wasn't, Jo told herself ruefully, a flattering thought.

75 Millions for Security Program

Budget Bureau Recommends This Amount for Next 10 Months

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—An appropriation of $75,000,000 to start the giant economic security program was recommended Sunday by the Budget Bureau.

The money would be expended in the next 10 months. The sum approved by the bureau in a message to the house appropriations committee is nearly 25 per cent less than the $98,000,000 authorized for expenditure this year in the security law signed by President Roosevelt last week.

The original estimate was for the fiscal year ending next July 1, but a quarter of that year will have passed before the act becomes operative. Congress is expected to vote the funds before adjournment.

It was said that any deficiency of the still unapproved Economic Security Board may run up could be met by an appropriation when congress reconvenes next January.

Officials close to the cabinet committee said that even more than $98,000,000 may be required before July 1 if the relief administration's plan to remove unemployables from relief rolls is carried out this winter. This program, they said, would add to state aid rolls and thus to the amount of federal grants to the states for old age pensions.

Tomorrow is Somebody's BIRTHDAY

What's the date today?... Why, say... tomorrow... why... tomorrow is somebody's birthday!

Someone you love and hold dear. Mother, dad, sister, brother. An old friend. A teacher, a little boy or girl, a baby.
Show you haven't forgotten...

Send a Birthday Present!

Maybe it isn't tomorrow; maybe it's the day after, next week, a month from now. Maybe it was yesterday... but even so, it's not too late. Send a birthday present.

Send a birthday present to the nephew or niece away at school who thinks you are, well, just the grandest person in all the world. Prove it. Put a piece of your heart in a package and write that boy's, that girl's name on the label. Send a birthday present.

Send a birthday present to your sweetheart. Make it a personal gift.
It needn't be expensive. But pick it out yourself. Choose it just to please the one you love best. And then, send it with your love.

There's a newsboy down at the corner. A birthday is a big thing to him. Show him you remember. Give him a smile when you buy your paper; and with it give a book, a box of candy, a baseball glove.
He will grow up to be a better, finer man just because you remembered his birthday with a present.

Send a birthday present to the boy or girl you used to pal around with as a child, the boy or girl who watched you blow out the candles on your own birthday cake in the long ago. Old friendships are the best; don't lose them. Keep them—with a birthday present!

The nurse who took such good care of you when you were small.
She won't have many more birthdays. How delighted she will be to know you haven't forgotten! Don't wait—next year may be too late.
Send a birthday present.

Send a birthday present! There's no finer, grander custom. Every- one sends Christmas gifts—that's habit, it's expected, counted on. But you don't have to send a birthday present—it's unexpected, it shows thoughtfulness, consideration—and that's what makes it so welcome.
Give! It is the most wonderful thing you can do. You get so much back. Love, happiness, friendship, affection. All the things that really count.

Just because you don't have to do it—send a birthday present!

Send a birthday present. Don't send money... send the one thing you know that person will like best. It really doesn't matter what—or how much it costs. A present that cost one dollar—a present that you picked out yourself—is better than a new ten dollar bill. Just because you have said, "There! That is just what he wants!"

Chip in and help buy your boss a birthday present. You know the grief he's had steering the business through the rough water, trying to meet the payroll, to keep up salaries. Your troubles have been his troubles. Show him you know—with a birthday present!

Send a birthday present to the man you do business with, the customer whose trade has meant so much to you. He won't misunderstand.
Just to make sure he won't, send a present to the man who sells you goods.

Send a birthday present! It doesn't matter what you send. Flowers, a toy, your picture, a pipe, a rug, a clock, perfume, a puppy, a pair of socks—send anything!

But send it! It's a birthday present—and it's from you.

Meat Strikers Go to the President

Wallace Blames Meat Shortage on Last Year's Great Drouth

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Five million leaders of the meat striking Detroit housewives Monday thrust upon the White House and the Department of Agriculture demands for lower meat costs and the immediate investigation of packers' profits. The delegation failed to see President Roosevelt, however, and obtained but little satisfaction from Secretary Wallace.

Led by Mrs. Mary Zuk, the women were told by Marvin H. McIntyre, presidential secretary, that Mr. Roosevelt was too busy to see them Monday.

Mrs. Zuk, Mrs. Pearl Alterman, Mrs. Catherine Mudra, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Ness and Irene Thompson, negro, appeared at the office of Calvin Hoover, AAA consumers' council, posed for photographs, distributed copies of a prepared statement, and demanded that Hoover obtain for them a conference with Secretary Wallace. Hoover said the AAA would do that if possible, but that there was little that could be done except produce more meat. A major investigation could only be instituted by congress, he said.

As Hoover spoke, Wallace entered the room through a side door and was handed a copy of the statement. After he had read it, Mrs. Zuk asked:

"Mr. Wallace, is the government going to make an open investigation of the packers at Detroit?"

"Last year," replied Wallace, "we had the worst drouth we have ever had. There was a loss of one billion bushels of corn and a great shortage of hay and pasture crops. This condition means in the following year there is bound to be a meat shortage. The only way to affect prices is to have more meat."

Labor Federation Rebuffs Radicals

Arkansas Convention at Paris Bars Four Alleged Delegates

PARIS, Ark.—(AP)—With fraternal delegates from Commonwealth college, the Southern Tenant Farmers Union and the Workers Alliance of America denied a seating, a decisive victory for the "right wingers" was marked up Monday as the Arkansas Federation of Labor opened its 29th annual convention here.

Only four seats were involved in the controversy for control of the federation, but the days' result was considered a severe defeat for the "left wing" faction headed by the Rev. Claud C. Williams, former Presbyterian minister, and J. Austin Beasley, instructor, formerly employed by the Relief Administration at Little Rock.

The rejected delegates announced "the fight isn't over" and retired for a conference.

Delegates excluded were Henry Eason and Miss Lillian Fines of Common wealth college, Bob Reid, representing the Workers Alliance of America, and holding credentials from both Williams and Beasley, and R. J. Butler of Trumann, chairman of the National Socialist party in Arkansas and also president of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union.

Dodge Heiress to Wed Again

Mrs. Delphine Dodge Baker, above, daughter of the late Detroit auto manufacturer, will be a bride soon in Windsor, England, her third husband to be Timothy M. Goddard, son of a noted French silk magnate. Mrs. Baker was divorced in 1923 from James Cromwell, who last February married Doris Duke, and her second husband, Raymond Baker, ex-nint director, died early this year.

Rogers' Wit Got to War President

Wilson Laughed Upbraught as Comedian Joked in Critical Days

BY JACK STINNETT

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Will Rogers gave politics a sense of humor. He taught politicians to laugh at themselves.

He entered the political stage through the side-door of public entertainment, but more than one politician has attested to the influence Will Rogers exerted through his witty writings and speeches.

When the United States was knocking on the door of the World War, Will Rogers was playing in Baltimore.

President Wilson had come down from Washington to see the show. It was Rogers' first experience kidding a president. Cautiously he threw a few quips at the president's box. It was at the time of troubles with Mexico. The government was being severely criticized for its failure to capture Villa, for unpreparedness of the army.

The President Laughed

"There is some talk of getting a machine gun, if we can borrow one," Rogers said, twirling his rope. "The one we have now they are using to train our army with in Plattsburg. If we go to war we will just have to go to the trouble of getting another gun."

The president was laughing heartily. "President Wilson is getting along fine now to what he was a few months ago," Rogers went on. "Do you realize, people, that at one time in our negotiations with Germany we were five notes behind?"

President Wilson almost roared with laughter. And Rogers had one of his most successful nights on the stage.

His words had an underlying good sense that made the man respected as a commentator on the changing scene. Never any respecter of persons, he took delight in poking fun at those who sat in high places.

"Political self-starters," he dubbed those who are caught up in a whirlwind of pre-conventional enthusiasm, and the name stuck.

Hurley a Close Friend

His reporting on that long draggy Democratic convention of 1924 made his comments the daily talk of Main Street.

"They Nominated Everybody but the Four Horsemen," he titled one of his reports from that session.

Always, after that convention, he was a welcome guest at any political gathering and in the homes of Washington's greatest.

One of his closest friends was Pat Hurley, secretary of war under President Hoover. And Hurley attests that Rogers' "off the record" advice was filled with political wisdom.

Not Seriously

Al Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt were hardly more prominent in the 1932 Democratic convention than the cowboy humorist. He was introduced to the convention by Eddie Dowling, of the stage. For 15 minutes he forgot their troubles as Rogers tossed his quips at the biggest of the political big-wigs.

But just how seriously he took the talk of his nomination was exemplified a little later. When the Oklahoma delegation shifted its 22 votes to Will Rogers he was asleep.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

Rogers' Best Quips "Off the Record"

"What! No Garbo?" as Will Teases Fred Stone at Hollywood Party

HOLLYWOOD—(AP)—Many of Will Rogers' "gags" never made the record but in the memory of his many friends these anecdotes hold treasured spots.

Here are a few which occasion auspicious or otherwise brought forth: Louis B. Mayer, film executive, gave a formal birthday dinner honoring the late Marie Dressler.

The party was, some of the guests thought, too glad and dignified.

Several months later another producer, Hal Roach, gave a lavish dinner dance in honor of his anniversary in film production. It was one of the most elaborate festivities Hollywood had seen in years.

Will Rogers, as one of the guest speakers, turned to Mayer among the guests and said:

"Leucic, this party makes you look like a heel."

Mr. Mayer's next party out did Roach's in lavishment.

What! No Garbo?

Appearing with his friend, Fred Stone, at a civic banquet, Rogers asked Stone what he wanted to see in Hollywood. Stone said "Garbo." Rogers asked him to make another selection and after an exchange in which Stone stuck to his original choice and Rogers continued to urge him to say somebody else Rogers said: "Of course Fred, you know all about Broadway, but we can't expect you to know much about Hollywood. If you had been cut here much I wouldn't have to put you straight on this. There isn't any such person as Garbo. Deitrich plays both parts."

Denor Unknown

Rogers never let this be known, but workers on his pictures vouch for it.

Often in a hurry to finish a picture so as to be off on a trip somewhere, Will would work so as to wind up three or four days ahead of time.

And then to compensate each of the employees for the money they might have earned in the extra time, he made up the difference from his own pocket.

Hoover Didn't Need It

He was once criticized for imitating the late President Coolidge's voice in a radio broadcast. In another speech he explained: "Everybody knew Mr. Coolidge wasn't speaking," he said. "They knew he wouldn't have been up that late at night."

At Kansas City before the Republican convention of 1928 he gave some advice to the delegates "There are about a dozen candidates," he said with a grin. "Nominate any of them except that engineer, Hoover. He is the only one in the crowd that can make a living doing something else."

He was a far better polo player than was generally credited and wanted action always. He objected to fouls and chided umpire Jack Holt for calling penalties. "Who commits the foul, the player or the umpire?" shot back Holt. "About fifty-fifty," said Rogers.

Standard Attire

Rogers' standard attire, even for the most formal occasions, was an old blue serge suit with soft collar shirt and black tie.

On off-days at the studio, when he would just come over to "blather" with cronies, he would be seen in his favorite overalls, and battered old brown hat.

On one occasion the script called for his appearance in a tuxedo. Rogers' contract called for him to supply his own wardrobe, except in costume pictures.

"This tuxedo thing," he insisted, "is a costume. The studio has to get it."
